

Fed Navigator — Advisor Cheat Sheet

Before you dial, speak in their words.

The one move that books appointments: open the workshop report and click the attendee's name before you call. You'll instantly see their time in session, every chat they typed, every question they asked, and their evaluation comment. Now you're not "following up" — you're calling about the exact thing they raised. That's the difference between a voicemail and a booked meeting.

Do this before every call — 30 seconds

1. Click their name in the Live attendees list to open their profile.
2. Read their questions, chats, and comment — that is what's on their mind.
3. Open with it, in their words: "You asked about survivor benefits — let's put your real numbers to it."

Call in this order — work by heat, not top to bottom

Call order	Who	When
1	Retiring ≤ 6 months and asked a personal question	Within 48 hours
2	Retiring 6–12 months (including "possibly")	This week
3	Asked for cliff notes / materials — they asked you for something	Today, then offer a chat
4	Stayed to the end / asked multiple questions	Email now, call next
5	Everyone else who attended	Nurture list

What to say — steal this

"Hi [Name], this is [Advisor] — I led [day]'s federal retirement workshop. You asked about [their question]. That's a lot easier to walk through with your real numbers in front of us. Do you have a few minutes this week?"

No answer? Leave a voicemail and text/email the same question. (Text only those who opted in — the export flags them.)

Your week, at a glance

- Same day — send whatever people asked for (cliff notes, materials). That email is your opener.
- Within 48 hours — call your top tier, referencing their words.
- This week — email the rest with the workshop's rating (e.g. "rated 4.7 out of 5") and a clear ask.
- Quarterly — re-open past workshops: last quarter's "12 months out" is now "6 months out."

Bottom line: the report already told you what each person cares about. Lead with that, move fast, and the meeting books itself.

Full playbook: the "Guide" tab in your dashboard. Questions? Your Fed Navigator account manager.